Chicago, Ill., April 7.—In the local option elections held by 1,200 townships in 84 counties of Illinois outside of the city of Chicago today,
twenty counties became absolutely anti-saloon territory and approximately 1,500, or about one-half of the total number of saloons in that territory were voted out of business.

Most of the larger cities of the state, however, voted in favor of licensing saloons. The larger cities voting in favor of the saloons are Springfield, Freeport, Aurora, Elgin,
Sterling, Kankakee Lincoln, Mon-
mouth, Bloomington, Danville, Joliet,
Murphysboro and Rock Island.

Those voting to abolish the saloon
were Rockford Decatur, Dixon, Hoops-
town, Georgetown, Pontiac, Shelbyville
Carbondale and Champaign.

The following counties are now absolutely anti-saloon territory, so created by the voters today, and are in addition to the six which voted last November to abolish licenses: Boone,
Moultrie, Fayette, Hamilton, Edgar, Clark, Brown, Saline, Gallatin, Douglass, Macon, Cumberland, Platt, Shelby, Coles, White, Wayne and Richland.

In Kenosha, Matheas J. Scholey,
democrat, agent for a brewery company, defeated Edward S. Altman by 50 votes.

The following places voted for licenses: Altoona, Kenosha, West Salem, Toman, Union Grove, Mauston,
Lancaster, Galesville, Platteville,
White Hall, Ladysmith, Mineral Point,
Peawaukee.

The following places voted on license: Sparta, Viroqua, Laferge, Richland Center, Reedstown, Dodgeville.

At Madison Mayor J. C. Shubert,
democrat, won out by 1,205 over W. J.
McKay who favors Sunday closing.

WHITE WOMAN SHOOTS BURGLAR.

Montgomery Lady Kills Negro in Attempt to Drag Aged Father
Through Window.

Montgomery, Ala., April 5.—With deliberate aim Mrs. Tessie Jones at 3 o'clock this morning shot and killed Nelson Croom, a negro who was in a life and death struggle with her father.
The ball was fired at a distance of two feet into the left eye of the intruder.
She was awakened by a noise at her window, and told her sister, who called her father. Mrs. Jones secured an old revolver, and as her father opened the blinds the negro grabbed him and tried to pull him from his window.
He had the white man well outside
when the woman ran to the window,
rested her arm and pulled the trigger.
Twice the weapon snapped, but the third time it exploded, the ball burying itself in the skull of the negro. It is evident that the negro figured to get the old man out, knock him in the head and then have his own way with the women.

DETERMINED JUDGE CLEANS UP SAPULPA

Bootleggers, Gamblers, Prostitutes
and Other Undesirable Citizens
on the Run in Creek County.

Sapulpa, April 6.—Judge Josiah G.
Davis Judge-elect of Creek county, is no doubt the busiest judge in Oklahoma today. For some time past the idea has been prevalent here that a large per cent of the business men wanted Sapulpa open. For some reason the city has been decidedly open for a long time and Sapulpa won a reputation among gamblers, lewd women, bootleggers and vags that follow, for her decided easiness. Now times are changing. A local newspaper, The Evening News, came out a short time since with its front page bearing a half-tone cut of Judge Davis and publishing an interview with him to the effect that every man convicted in his court for selling intoxicating liquors was going to serve a jail sentence regardless of his wealth
or station. Since then raids by county officials have been frequent and last evening 12 men were caught in one place, a joint, and the whole doc-en placed in county jail where they stayed until 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. They were at this hour given an arraignment. Lon Ammerman, the supposed owner of the joint, was released on bond of $500, while the 11
others charged with vagrancy, went back to jail to await trial May 4th.
Those who can do so will be granted
bond of $200 each. A report is current on the streets of the city tonight that a raid is in progress and all those without visible means of support are ordered to hike out of town without delay and never to return. They are certainly getting out.
The report also states that unless those determined to keep the city unclean get out of town that there will be trouble. The jail is full of common foot-bads and other crooks. The motto of the better class of the citizens is, "A cleaner and greater Sapulpa."

DECIDES AGAINST SENATOR OWEN

Oklahoma Senaator Must Pay Services Rendered by Law Firm.

Washington, April 7.—United States
Senator Owen of Oklahoma must pay
the law firm of Dudley & Milchner $10,000 for services rendered by them in connection with an allowance of the $5,000,000 claim of the Cherokee Indians granted by the last congress
according to a decision today by Justice Robb of the District of Columbia court of appeals. The decision says that Senaator Owen received an attorney's fee of $750,000 under the claim as allowed by congress.

The decision reverses the District
Supreme court which found in Owen's
favor. "The appellants" said Judge Robb, "have rendered Owen the services they agreed to render and he has reaped the benefit."

PRO GAINS IN NEBRASKA.

Returns from Thirty or Forty Towns
Show Two-Thirds Have Gone Dry

Omaha, Neb., April 7.—Meager returns so far received from the municipal elections throughout the state,
indicate that the prohibition element
has made decided gains in Nebraska. Only thirty or forty towns have been heard from up to 10 o'clock tonight, but of this number about two-thirds had gone "dry," and more than half of these were "wet" last year. So far none of those which were "dry"
heretofore are reporting as voting
"wet" today. Lincoln, the state capital, voted to retain saloons by a majority of 174 in a total vote of 7,800. This was at a special election, no city officials being elected this year. The Lincoln Excise Board recently issued an order restricting the sale of liquor
to the hours between 7 a. m. and 7

WOMEN AND CHILDREN PARADE THE STREETS

Wives and Children of Drunkards Will Be at the Polling Places as a Silent Appeal for Prohibition.

Bloomington, Ill., April 6.—Women and children waving flags and banners paraded the streets of Bloomington today appealing to the voters to drive out the saloons. The procession was the final demonstration of a spectacular campaign for local option. There were many women in ragged garments, said to be the wives and little children of drunkards, in the long parade of one thousand women and 3,000 children.

"Vote yes," "Protect us from the saloon," "Save the boys," and little mottoes were displayed.

Tomorrow women and children will serve hot coffee and sandwiches to the men at the polls. At every polling place there will, it is announced by wives and children of drunkards using their presence as a mute appeal.

REPUBLICANS FLEE TO BREAK QUORUM

Washington, April 7.—Following the failure today of the democratic members of the house committee on election of the president, vice president and representatives in congress to enforce action by that committee on the bill introduced by Mr. McCall of Massachusetts (rep.) to compel the publication of campaign contributions, hot words were passed, and the committee meeting broke up and an organized movement is now on foot on the democratic side of the house to openly charge the republicans with cowardice in systematically and persistently failing and refusing to go on record as either favoring or opposing the campaign publicity bill.

Validity of State Warrants.

Guthrie, Ok., April 7.—A friendly suit to test the validity of state warrants thus far issued and cashed by State Treasurer Meneff was commenced today in the state supreme court.

It is claimed that, under a clause in the constitution no evidence of indebtedness of the state shall be valid unless indorsed with a certificate signed by the State Auditor and the Attorney General, showing that the debt is issued pursuant to law and within the required limits.

Heretofore, although $230,000 in warrants have been issued since statehood became effective, Attorney General West has never been asked to indorse state warrants, and a question of their legality thus arose. In order to test the matter, Treasurer Meneff refused to cash a warrant held by his clerk, A. D. Bryan, and Bryan began this suit to compel him to cash it.

Bishop Key's Stirring Address. Oklahoma City, Ok., April 7.—Condemning Christian Science as a new form of Hindooism, commending Oklahoma State officials for the manner in which they are enforcing the prohibition laws, and scoring Secretary W. H. Taft for a decision which he handed down while on the Ohio supreme bench prohibiting religious worship in the public schools, Bishop Key of Sherman, Tex., delivered the principal address of the State Methodist Sunday school conference today. His subject was "Our Boys; Can We Save Them, and How."

About 600 delegates are attending the conference.

Rejects Commission Form of Government.

Shawnee, Ok., April 7.—City election here today for aldermen, members of school board, an arressor and two freeholders from each ward to prepare a new charter to be voted on by the people resulted in an overwhelming victory for the democrats, who were assisted by many republicans to defeat the citizens' alliance candidates or mixed ticket. This means that Shawnee rejects the commission form of government as lines were drawn on that proposition.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible, but I can now surely kill the pain and purge of this deplorable disease. In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

Status of Seized Liquors.

Guthrie, Ok., April 7.—The state superintendent of dispensaries has been unable to get possession of some of the liquor seized by county officials prior to the passage of the Billups enforcement law, and it is probable another law will have to be enacted to cover the stocks so held. Liquors confiscated heretofore, it is said, are not strictly subject to the present code, but are being retained by the courts pending trial of the case through which they were seized. For this reason the state superintendent was unable to secure $2,000 worth of liquor held in Oklahoma City.

We regret to see Ed leave. He will be missed by his many friends who wish him much luck in his new home.

Mrs. J. E. Bills left for Sherman this morning and Mr. Bills will go tonight to be with Little Loma during her illness. It will be remembered she underwent a difficult operation some time ago, and her parents have been informed the second operation will be necessary. We hope soon to chronicle her recovery and their early return to Ada.

Last night Miss Carter made her initial appearance on the stage before a Jennings audience. Miss Carter makes a beautiful appearance on the stage. She is calm and perfectly self possessed, and during the last reading entitled, "Sally Ann's Experience" the audience nearly went into convulsions with laughter. The case of Overchain & Boyer vs. City of Roff, is on trial this afternoon. This is a suit brought by plaintiffs to collect amount due on two chemical engines sold the city of Roff in 1904. City Attorney Anderson is representing Roff and is hotly contesting the case.

That languid, lifeless feeling that comes with spring and early summer, can be quickly changed to a feeling of buoyancy and energy by the judicious use of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is a genuine tonic to tired, run-down nerves, and but a few doses is needed to satisfy the user that Dr. Shoop's Restorative is actually reaching that tired spot. The indoor life of winter nearly always leads to sluggish bowels, and to sluggish circulation in general. The customary lack of exercise and outdoor air ties up the liver, stagnates the kidneys, and oft-times weakens the Heart's action. Use Dr. Shoop's Restorative a few weeks and all will be changed. A few days test will tell you that you are using the right remedy. You will easily and surely note the change from day to day. Sold by G. M. Ramsey.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG

By EARL MARBLE

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

There was always much wonder expressed by the neighbors and friends of the Cherington family that the eldest daughter, Millicent, was so very different from the other members, aside from her mother. She was dainty and spirituelle, as her mother must have been in her younger days, and indeed as she was still in a modified way, along late in her thirties, as she was at the period of this story. It had often been remarked that Mrs. Cherington was a poem, while Millicent was a dream. These two, in their characteristics, stood out as distinct from the other members of the family. The others were solid, substantial-looking people, who had the appearance of seldom missing a meal, and certainly never lacking one. They looked well kept and well groomed.

Students of psychology said that it must have been because Millicent was born when her mother's love was young and before the sordid ideas of life had sunk their talons into her soul. And yet these same students of psychology never deigned to explain why it was that the sordid ideas came so suddenly after Millicent was born, since there was only a matter of less than three years between her age and that of her sister next to her.

Millicent was lively and entertaining in a refined and spiritual as well as artistic way, and the other children were equally lively and entertaining in a material way. They all lived in much harmony.

The family one season took a trip to Europe, and while there Mrs. Cherington concluded to stop for a time in Paris, keeping her three daughters with her, allowing the son to go back with his father, as the demands of business were pressing.

The ladies visited art galleries and studios, as Millicent and her mother were very artistic by nature, and the other two daughters often went along with them, much because it was considered the correct thing to do.

And then something happened. It was a day of surprise and sensation when St. Gervais came into the lives of Millicent and her mother. The artist had known her mother in her early days in New York, before she was married, he having set up his easel in New York for a time, hoping to make a greater success in this country of swelled incomes than in his native country of France. But after a year or two he returned to Paris, and latterly was making the decided success there that he had longed for.

"Mrs. Cherington? Mrs. Cherington?" he read from her card, as he gazed at it when she had handed it to him, after the first moment of surprise at meeting him had passed away, and she stood before him with much of her old girlish manner again expressing itself. "I am delighted to renew my acquaintance with madame, who, when I knew her, was Mees—"

"Miss Eleanor Trimble," she hastened to help his memory out.

"Certain! and a delightful lady she was. I have a sketch here, a study for which madam was good enough to give me some sittings two, three times. I painted a salon picture from it, and the critics were quite enthusiastic over it. But that was so many years ago, though madam does not look it."

During his talk he had been overhauling canvases here and there until the right one was found, when it was brought forth with great flourish and placed on an easel before them.

"How lovely!" exclaimed Millicent, her eyes dancing with delight; "and how lovely that we should have found monsieur! It depicts your very soul, mother, darling."

"Ah, but Mees Cherington, it did not do her justice—she was so very beautiful, and I was so crude. No art could reproduce such exquisite nature, madam."

"You are so nice, so generous, to speak of my beautiful mother in such a generous and appreciative way. I shall take advantage of my stay in Paris to look at your studio often."

"My studio is your home—that is—pardon, mademoiselle—the what you Americans call the latch-string is always out."

Mrs. Cherington bowed in a somewhat embarrassed way, and the daughter was about to continue her enthusiastic comments when St. Gervais spoke:

"Might I presume on the younger lady, as I did in America on the elder one, to sit here a few minutes two or three times, and read or do what she pleases, while I make a sketch of her. I have an idea for 'La Belle Americaine,' and I can get no one to what you Americans call fill the bill, till mademoiselle here sail into my studio."

"Won't that be a lark, mother? May I come?"

"Sitting is very tiresome, Millicent." "I do not wish her to be a model and sit by rule, madam. She sit or walk around or do what she please, and I catch the spirit and the character."

"Well, monsieur, Millicent can come once, and we shall see the result."

"Thanks, madam. You give me much pleasure and do me much honor."

The result was that Millicent visited the studio three times during the next fortnight, and St. Gervais sent enthusiastic messages by her to her mother, as to the progress made, and that the success of his painting depended on the beautiful and spirituelle young lady, and his own future greatness was contingent on the success of the picture.

Millicent was quite as enthusiastic about the work as was the voluble St. Gervais, and from that to rhapsodies about the artist required but a short step.

She came home in a flutter from a visit to the studio one day, and confided to her mother that her feeling for the artist was such that she could not curb it, but must give it expression.

"What do you think he did to-day?" she asked, her face all aglow. "He kissed me, and then seized his palette and mahi-stick and began to work enthusiastically, saying that my blush was just the touch of color that had been lacking. Was I unladylike to let him kiss me? But it was so sudden that I could not help it."

"It must not be, my daughter. What do you know about him?"

"He says he is all alone in the world, and that I would fill the unoccupied part of his being."

"My God, Millicent! what have I done, to allow this thing to go on!"

"Why, mother—"

"I never dreamed of this, there was such a disparity in your ages."

The elder woman tried to induce the younger one to remain away from the studio, but Millicent refused, saying that the success of the picture, and the final triumph of the artist, were in her hands and she should continue to go until the work was done.

"I will go and see the picture and M. St. Gervais in a few days," said the mother, "and then we will see what can be done."

So she went down to his studio two or three days later, and on entering it was met by him and greeted with great politeness.

"Henri," she said—"I may call you by the old name by which I knew you in New York, may I not?"

"Certainty, Mme. la Cherington."

"My daughter must not come here any more."

"Oh, madam! the picture!"

"The picture is perfect now—exquisite, Henri! You do not need her for the picture any longer."

"But, madam, do not rob me of her, as you did of her mother years ago. I need her for myself. I love her."

"But that can never be."

"Oh, madam, you sound my doom!"

"You sound the girl's doom, as well as your own. It cannot be. Can you not see why?"

"Certainly not, madam. She is chic. She is spirituelle. She is the personification of what is possible in an art atmosphere when love is young."

"But your love is not young. It is old."

"Madam—pardon—I am in middle life; but my love is young—as young as hers, bless God!"

"Listen, Henri."

"Yes, madam."

At this moment, Millicent, hearing the earnest tones, stepped out from behind a screen and, unseen by either of them, stood within hearing distance while they continued their conversation.

"Henri, you have seen Mr. Cherington and the rest of my children."

"Not monsieur, but the other two children."

"Well, they are like their father, and she is unlike either of them."

"But she is like madam."

"Yes, but why are none of the others?"

"Because, madam, you drifted away from your ideals, and—"

"My God! do you know what you are saying?"

"Madam!"

"Millicent does not love Mr. Cherington, as a child should love her father. Do you know why?"

"Have I not just answered your question, madam?"

"Listen! Listen! Can you not understand?"

"Pardon—I do not understand."

"You must not make love to my daughter any more."

"Why not, madam, if she loves me, as she does?"

"Oh, you are so blind! so blind! Can you not see? Because she is your daughter as well as mine!"

DUKE'S BUBBLE.

It Burst But It Led to a Great Discovery.

It is a dreadful thing to live in the house with a thief, and worse not to know who the thief is. Dorothy and Mabel had tried over and over to solve the mystery. There seemed to be no solution to it. The mystery was this: One day in the winter a cousin of mamma's, a very beautiful young lady, had come to visit at the house. When she was dressing for dinner, she carelessly left a valuable ruby pin on the dressing table. After dinner the pin was not there!

Such a hubbub as Cousin Gladys created. She cried and cried and almost had hysterics, for the pin was her most cherished treasure. It had been given her by her grandmother, whose grandmother had in turn given it to her, so you see it was very, very old and valuable.

It was out of the question to accuse either Maria or John of dishonesty, for they were as honest as the day is long. Duke had been the soul of honor ever since he had been an inmate of the household—and what would a small fox terrier want of a large ruby breastpin, anyway? Topsy had denied any knowledge of the affair; they could not suspect her. She might have been guilty of stealing a piece of fish—or a mouse—but what would a cat want to steal rubies for?

The only possible solution was that some one had entered the house while the family was at dinner, stolen the pin and gone off without being seen. If there had only been footsteps in the snow to trace the thief—but there was no sign.

So the matter was dropped entirely, except by the children who had created wonderful tales about the loss of the ruby.

One beautiful June day Mabel and Dot had a "bubble bee" all by themselves. Harold—disagreeable boy!—had gone off fishing and refused to take any girls. He declared they were "always in the way."

"I'd rather blow bubbles with my new pipe anyway," said Dot airily, as Harold went down the walk. There was a suggestion of a sob in her voice, but she held her head high. Mabel said not a word. One thing she did love—and that was to fish. Duke pushed his cold little nose comfortably into her hand. He liked to go fishing, too. But blowing bubbles was very fascinating, especially with the new colored bubble soap, and it was not long before the two little girls were happy again and Duke was wild with delight. As each bubble grew bigger and bigger, Duke barked louder and louder, and begged that one should be given him to play with. But for little dogs, bubbles are poor playthings and last but a minute. It required great attention on the part of both blowers to prevent their work meeting instant destruction.

Dot blew the best, there was no question of that, but Mabel's bubbles seemed to last longer. And it was one of Mabel's that went bouncing along on the breeze, with Duke in hot pursuit. Both girls were laughing merrily at the queer antics of Duke and his plaything, when the bubble descended and Duke pounced upon his prize. Of course, it burst at once, and the dog jumped back with a sneeze. Then, seizing something with his teeth he sprang back.

"Poor old Duke!" cried Dot. "I'll blow you one just as big; just watch."

But Duke was not interested in bubbles; he had found another plaything.

"Oh, drop that old stick and come along!" cried Mabel. "See, Duke! See the nice big bubbles. Catch it, sir! Catch it!"

But Duke would pay no attention. "I believe he has something alive!" said Dot. "Perhaps it's a poor, dear little toad. Oh, Duke, aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

Duke wagged his tail, not a bit ashamed, and deposited at Dot's feet a queer and dirty object.

"It isn't a toad," said Dot. "It's only an old—why, Mabel, Mabel, Fletcher, it's—it's—" and Dot gasped in amazement at the object in her hand.

"It's Cousin Gladys' lost ruby pin!" shouted Mabel. "Where under the sun did it come from?"

Pipes were dropped in a hurry and the two little girls stood and gazed at each other in silence. Duke was jumping impatiently for his plaything. Then Mabel looked up at the house. The window in the spare room where Cousin Gladys had slept was open and the ruffled white curtain blew gently in and out. As they stood spellbound the curtain blew in toward the table and out again, and on the edge of the ruffle was a scrap of paper, which fluttered slowly to the ground. "Ah!" cried Dot softly. "I see the thief!" And then they rushed indoors to tell the news.

Great good news it was, too. The ruby pin had apparently been caught by the same curtain and gently deposited outside on the ground, as the scrap of paper had been, and there it had lain hidden in the snow and mud and new spring grass.

Cousin Gladys received a telegram that afternoon, and in reply this letter came:

"My dear little cousins, and Duke, too: I am so happy to hear that my treasure has been found, that I want you to bring it to me and to spend a week with me in the city—all three of you. So ask your mother to pack your trunk, tell your father to put you safely on the cars and I will meet you. We will have a jolly good time, and you will be here just in time to be bridesmaids at my wedding, for which you will each have a pretty new frock presented to you. I won't take 'no' for an answer."

Soon after the receipt of the letter two very important-looking little girls, and an equally important-looking little dog, started for the city, leaving Harold on the station platform waving an envious good-bye.

"Isn't it fortunate," sighed Dot as they settled back in the big cushioned seat, "that we didn't go fishing that day?"—Nancy Scott, in Washington Star.

CATCHING THE MICE.

Can You Tell How the Cat Played Fair.

"Play fair!" said the mice. "You know the rules of the game." "Yes, I know the rules," said the cat. "I've got to go round and round

The Problem of the Cat and the Mice.

the circle, in the direction that you are going, and eat every thirteenth mouse, but I must keep the white mouse for a tit-bit at the finish. Thirteen is an unlucky number, but I will do my best to oblige you."

"Hurry up, then!" shouted the mice. "Give a fellow time to think," said the cat. "I don't know which of you to start at. I must figure it out."

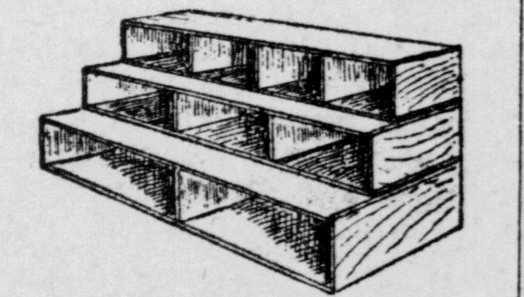

While the cat was working out the puzzle he fell asleep, and the spell being thus broken, the mice returned home in safety. At which mouse should the cat have started the count in order that the white mouse should be the last eaten?

When the reader has solved that little puzzle, here is a second one for him. What is the smallest number that the cat can count round and round the circle, if he must start at the white mouse (calling that "one" in the count) and still eat the white mouse last of all?

FLOWERS OF CANDY

NOVELTY OF THE SEASON IN TABLE DECORATION.

Rosebuds, Violets and Jonquils Nearly as Costly as the Real Flowers—Mint Most Expensive of the Candied Fruits.

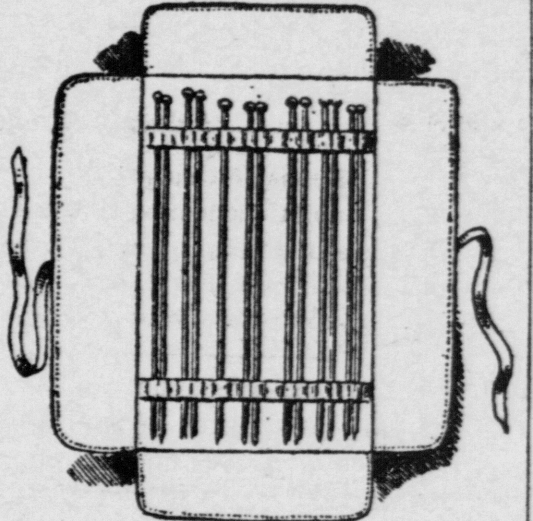

There have never been more elaborate decorations for the table than there are this winter and they are for the sake of novelty made of candy. They are nearly as costly as the real flowers.

Rosebuds somewhat smaller than the original are made in pink and white and glisten like their natural prototypes with dewdrops. They cost 15 cents each, while violets as large as the best of the natural ones and seemingly lacking only the fragrance of the real flowers cost five cents more. Jonquils are made somewhat smaller than the real size and so are the exquisite purple flags, which have the same variety of shades as the originals. The candies are an expensive item at a dinner when the guests take it into their heads to eat them. It rarely happens, however, that more than one or two persons make this unusual use of them.

None of the table flowers is so elaborate as the large pansies. They are also preserved in the natural colors.

HOLDS THE KNITTING NEEDLE. Easily Made Case That Will Be Found Very Serviceable.

We give a sketch of a very useful little case for holding knitting needles, which will be found of great service when travelling, or when carrying one's work from place to place. In fact, it will be handy on any and every occasion when the needles themselves are not actually in use. It can be made in any strong piece of silk, satin or brocade, or in kid or leather if preferred. The lining should be of wash leather in any case, while the straps which serve to hold the pins in place should be of elastic firmly stitched at intervals. It is intended that the flaps should fold over on to the needles, and the case then rolled up and tied with the ribbons as shown in our illustration.

THE USEFUL SEWING TABLE.

Martha Washington Style Is One of the Prettiest.

Sewing tables, which come in every shape and variety, are always useful and pretty pieces of furniture, particularly in a flat or apartment. The Martha Washington sewing table, that happens to be the rage at present, is one of the prettiest in these designs, and is very much copied in the modern furniture, and the antique dealers advertise them extensively, but it is doubtful whether the genuine specimens can be found so readily, and if found and properly authenticated they are generally very expensive.

The empire sewing table, which has the square shaft base and the plain legs, and has two drop-leaf sides, is a very good piece of small furniture, as besides the additional room across the top, it has two deep drawers with glass handles. The Chippendale sewing tables, with the fluted legs and the three drawers, one with space for spools and silks, are also much used, and the clawfoot and empire designs are endless in their variety and price.

GOOD AS DRAUGHT PROTECTION.

Newest Use to Be Made of Flowered Cretonne.

The newest use for the popular flowered cretonne is in a draught protector. It is about half a yard deep and is used to prevent too great a draught when the lower sash of a window is opened. To make one, take a strip of the cretonne and a strip of sateen the width of the window and sew them together all round, having first put up an interlining of stout brown paper. Then edge the whole thing with a pretty cord, making a loop of the cord at the two top corners, by which the protector is hung on to two brass hooks in the window frame.

These draught protectors make capital gifts for men living in rooms or at college and will be received with much approval. For this purpose it is

Over them is sifted a tiny shower of sugar, which barely conceals the purple and yellow tints. These blossoms cost as much as 30 cents. If every guest should decide to eat one it can be seen how much of an expense such a dish would be.

Among the candied fruits which are to be found in all shops none costs so much as the candied mint. But it is in the end less expensive than some of the others because so little of it is required. A pound of candied mint costs more than four dollars. But a taste is all that anybody requires, so strong is the flavor. The old-fashioned sugared violets have been almost entirely superseded at dinner by the new candied reproductions of the flowers. These colored flowers in candy are arranged just as the natural flowers. There are not violets and rosebuds, jonquils and fleur de lis all in one bonbonniere. The same color scheme is maintained throughout all the dishes. Just as the real jonquils are grouped together in the flower vases, so are the yellow sugar blossoms placed together with no other flower to break the color scheme.

Fortunate nowadays is the hostess who possesses low, flat candy dishes. The tops are covered with fine white perforated papers and on them the flowers are laid. They must not be crowded together, as in that way much of their effectiveness is lost. They are placed so as barely to touch. They do not retain nearly so much of their beauty when put into a deep dish.

CARE IN WASHING LACES. Precautions Will Prolong Usefulness of Dainty Garments.

Colored embroideries should be washed in suds made of white soap in moderately warm water. They must never be boiled nor allowed to lie wet after washing. Instead, they should be hung up immediately to dry in a shady place.

Sunlight will fade the colors, and boiling or lying in a wet heap will cause them to run.

An added precaution well worth adopting is to immerse the piece previous to washing it in water containing a cupful or two of vinegar, the object being to neutralize the alkali of the soap.

Embroidered and lace-trimmed pieces should be taken from the line while but half dry and immediately ironed to secure the best result.

Never iron lace with the point of the wrong side over several layers of flannel covered with a sheet of old linen.

Never iron lace with the point of the iron if you would have it look like new. Pull and pat it into place, picking out the loops with a hairpin or pointless darning needle or bodkin. Dampen it with a wet cloth and press with the reverse iron, using its "heel" only.

better to use a smooth surface material that will not catch the dust, as housekeepers and laundresses usually are not willing to do too much shaking and brushing.

IN POMPADOUR SILK.

For a theater or dinner gown this is a charming suggestion in pink pompadour silk, with coat of plain pink satin. Trimming around bottom of skirt and at side seams is pink satin ribbon. White lace is effectively arranged at top of princess skirt and as a finish to the short sleeves. The buttons on front of coat are of rhinestones. For hair adornment there is a sweeping pink paradise aigrette fastened in front with a spray of brilliants.

absolutely dry and 1,500 saloons are put out of business in the state.
Michigan—Prohibitionists apparently carried ten of fifteen counties.
Wisconsin—David Rose, democrat, re-elected mayor for fifth time by 3,000 majority. Rose's slogan in campaign was "personal liberty."
Kansas City—Democratic ticket, headed by Thomas T. Crittenden Jr., elected.
Oklahoma City—Incomplete returns indicate republican victory in Aldermanic election.
Montgomery, Mo.—Young widow is elected city collector on temperance ticket.

Chicago, Ill., April 7.—In the local option elections held by 1,200 townships in 84 counties of Illinois outside of the city of Chicago today,
twenty counties became absolutely
anti-saloon territory and approximately 1,500, or about one-half of the total number of saloons in that territory were voted out of business.

Most of the larger cities of the state, however, voted in favor of licensing saloons. The larger cities
voting in favor of the saloons are Springfield, Freeport, Aurora, Elgin,
Sterling, Kankakee, Lincoln, Mon-
mouth, Bloomington, Danville, Joliet,
Murphysboro and Rock Island.

Those voting to abolish the saloon
were Rockford, Decatur, Dixon, Hoops-
town, Georgetown, Pontiac, Shelbyville,
Carbondale and Champaign.

The following counties are now absolutely anti-saloon territory, so created by the voters today, and are in addition to the six which voted last November to abolish licenses: Boone, Montrie, Fayette, Hamilton, Edgar,
Clark, Brown, Saline, Gallatin, Douglass, Macon, Cumberland, Platt, Shelby, Coles, White, Wayne and Rich-
land.

In Kenosha, Mathias J. Scholer,
democrat, agent for a brewery company, defeated Edward S. Aitman by 50 votes.

The following places voted for licenses: Altoona, Kenosha, West Su-
lem, Toman, Union Grove, Mauston,
Lancaster, Galesville, Platteville,
White Hall, Ladysmith, Mineral Point,
Peawaukee.

The following places voted on license: Sparta, Viroqua, Lafarge, Richland Center, Reedstown, Dodgeville.

At Madison Mayor J. C. Shubert,
democrat, won out by 1,205 over W. J.
McKay who favors Sunday closing.

WHITE WOMAN SHOTS BURGLAR.

Montgomery Lady Kills Negro In Attempt to Drag Aged Father
Through Window.

Montgomery, Ala., April 5.—With deliberate aim Mrs. Tessie Jones at 10
o'clock this morning shot and killed
Nelson Croom, a negro who was in a
life and death struggle with her father.
The ball was fired at a distance of two
feet into the left eye of the intruder.
She was awakened by a noise at her window, and told her sister, who called their father, Mrs. Jones secured an old revolver, and as her father opened the blinds the negro grabbed him and tried to pull him from his window.
He had the white man well outside
when the woman ran to the window,
rested her arm and pulled the trigger.
Twice the weapon snapped, but the third time it exploded, the ball burying itself in the skull of the negro. It is evident that the negro figured to get
the old man out, knock him in the head
and then have his own way with the women.

DETERMINED JUDGE CLEANS UP SAPULPA

Bootleggers, Gamblers, Prostitutes
and Other Undesirable Citizens
on the Run in Creek County.

Sapulpa, April 6.—Judge Josiah G.
Davis judge-elect of Creek county, is
no doubt the busiest judge in Oklahoma today. For some time past the idea has been prevalent here that a large per cent of the business men
wanted Sapulpa open. For some reason the city has been decidedly open
for a long time and Sapulpa won a reputation among gamblers, lewd women, bootleggers and vags that follow, for her decided easiness. Now
times are changing. A local newspaper, The Evening News, came out a short time since with its front page bearing a half-tone cut of Judge Davis and publishing an interview with him to the effect that every man convicted in his court for selling intoxicating liquors was going to serve a
jail sentence regardless of his wealth
or station. Since then raids by county officials have been frequent and last evening 12 men were caught in one place, a joint, and the whole dozen placed in county jail where they stayed until 8:30 o'clock this afternoon. They were at this hour given an arraignment. Lon Ammerman, the supposed owner of the joint, was released on bond of $500, while the 11
others charged with vagrancy, went back to jail to await trial May 4th.
Those who can do so will be granted
bond of $200 each. A report is current on the streets of the city tonight that a raid is in progress and
all those without visible means of support are ordered to hike out of town without delay and never to return. They are certainly getting out.
The report also states that unless
clean get out of town that there will be trouble. The jail is full of common foot-buds and other crooks. The motto of the better class of the citizens is, "A cleaner and greater Sa-
pulpa."

DECIDES AGAINST SENATOR OWEN

Oklahoma Senator Must Pay Services Rendered by Law Firm.

Washington, April 7.—United States
Senator Owen of Oklahoma must pay
the law firm of Dudley & Milchen-er $10,000 for services rendered by them in connection with an allowance of
the $5,000,000 claim of the Cherokee Indians granted by the last congress
according to a decision today by Justice Robb of the District of Columbia
court of appeals. The decision says that Senator Owen received an allowance of $750,000 under the claim as allowed by congress.

The decision reverses the District
Supreme court which found in Owen's
favor. "The appellants" said Judge Robb, "have rendered Owen the services they agreed to render and he has reaped the benefit."

Returns from Thirty or Forty Towns
Show Two-Thirds Have Gone Dry

Omaha, Neb., April 7.—Meager returns so far received from the municipal elections throughout the state,
indicate that the prohibition element
has made decided gains in Nebraska. Only thirty or forty towns have been heard from up to 10 o'clock tonight, but of this number about two-thirds had gone "dry," and more than half of these were "wet" last year. So far none of those which were "dry"
heretofore are reporting as voting
"wet" today. Lincoln, the state capital,
voted to retain saloons by a majority
of 174 in a total vote of 7,800. This was at a special election, no city officials being elected this year. The Lincoln Excise Board recently issued an order restricting the sale of liquor
to the hours between 7 a. m. and 7

Wives and Children of Drinkards Will Be at the Polling Places as a Silent Appeal for Prohibition.

Bloomington, Ill., April 6 Women and children waving flags and banners paraded the streets of Bloomington today appealing to the voters to drive out the saloons. The protest was the final demonstration of a spectacular campaign for local option. There were many women in ragged garments, said to be the wives of drunkards, and little children of drunksards in the long parade of one thousand women and 3,000 children.

Tomorrow women and children will serve hot coffee and sandwiches to the men at the polls. At every polling place there will, it is announced by wives and children of drunkards, be their presence as a mute appeal.

Washington, April 7.—Following the adjournment today of the democratic members of the house committee on elections of the president, vice president and representatives in congress to and from the states, the action of that committee on the nomination by Mr. McCall of Massachusetts (rep.) to compile the publication of campaign contributions, hot words were passed, and the committee meeting broke up and an organized movement is now on foot on the democratic side of the house to compel the republicans with persistence in yet more fully and persistently failing and refusing to go on record as either favoring or opposing the campaign publicity bill.

being retained by the courts pending trial of the case through which they were seized. For this reason the state superintendent of dispensaries has been unable to get possession of some of the liquor seized by county officials prior to the passage of the Phillips enforcement law, and it is probable another law will have to be enacted to cover the stocks so held. Liquors confiscated, however, it is said, are not strictly subject to the present code, but are being retained by the courts pending trial of the case through which they were seized. For this reason the state superintendent was unable to secure $2,000 worth of liquor held in Oklahoma City.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG

By EARL MARBLE

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

There was always much wonder expressed by the neighbors and friends of the Cherington family that the eldest daughter, Millicent, was so very different from the other members, aside from her mother. She was dainty and spirituelle, as her mother must have been in her younger days, and indeed as she was still in a modified way, along late in her thirties, as she was at the period of this story. It had often been remarked that Mrs. Cherington was a poem, while Millicent was a dream. These two, in their characteristics, stood out as distinct from the other members of the family. The others were solid, substantial-looking people, who had the appearance of seldom missing a meal, and certainly never lacking one. They looked well kept and well groomed.

Students of psychology said that it must have been because Millicent was born when her mother's love was young and before the sordid ideas of life had sunk their talons into her soul. And yet these same students of psychology never deigned to explain why it was that the sordid ideas came so suddenly after Millicent was born, since there was only a matter of less than three years between her age and that of her sister next to her.

Millicent was lively and entertaining in a refined and spiritual as well as artistic way, and the other children were equally lively and entertaining in a material way. They all lived in much harmony.

The family one season took a trip to Europe, and while there Mrs. Cherington concluded to stop for a time in Paris, keeping her three daughters with her, allowing the son to go back with his father, as the demands of business were pressing.

The ladies visited art galleries and studios, as Millicent and her mother were very artistic by nature, and the other two daughters often went along with them, much because it was considered the correct thing to do.

And then something happened.

It was a day of surprise and sensation when St. Gervais came into the lives of Millicent and her mother. The artist had known her mother in her early days in New York, before she was married, he having set up his easel in New York for a time, hoping to make a greater success in this country of swelled incomes than in his native country of France. But after a year or two he returned to Paris, and latterly was making the decided success there that he had longed for.

"Mrs. Cherington? Mrs. Cherington?" he read from her card, as he gazed at it when she had handed it to him, after the first moment of surprise at meeting him had passed away, and she stood before him with much of her old girlish manner again expressing itself. "I am delighted to renew my acquaintance with madame, who, when I knew her, was Mees—"

"Miss Eleanor Trimble," she hastened to help his memory out.

"Certainty!" and a delightful lady she was. I have a sketch here, a study for which madam was good enough to give me some sittings two, three times. I painted a salon picture from it, and the critics were quite enthusiastic over it. But that was so many years ago, though madam does not look it."

"How lovely!" exclaimed Millicent, her eyes dancing with delight; "and how lovely that we should have found monsieur! It depicts your very soul, mother, darling."

"Ah, but Mees Cherington, it did not do her justice—she was so very beautiful, and I was so crude. No art could reproduce such exquisite nature, madam."

"You are so nice, so generous, to speak of my beautiful mother in such a generous and appreciative way. I shall take advantage of my stay in Paris to look at your studio often."

"My studio is your home—that is—pardon, mademoiselle—the what you Americans call the latch-string is always out."

Mrs. Cherington bowed in a somewhat embarrassed way, and the daughter was about to continue her enthusiastic comments when St. Gervais spoke:

"Might I presume on the younger lady, as I did in America on the elder one, to sit here a few minutes two or three times, and read or do what she pleases, while I make a sketch of her. I have an idea for 'La Belle Americaine,' and I can get no one to what you Americans call fill the bill, till mademoiselle here will into my studio."

"Won't that be a lark, mother? May I come?"

"Sitting is very tiresome, Millicent." "I do not wish her to be a model and sit by rule, madam. She sit or walk around or do what she please, and I catch the spirit and the character."

"Well, monsieur, Millicent can come once, and we shall see the result."

"Thanks, madam. You give me much pleasure and do me much honor."

The result was that Millicent visited the studio three times during the next fortnight, and St. Gervais sent enthusiastic messages by her to her mother, as to the progress made, and that the success of his painting depended on the beautiful and spirituelle young lady, and his own future greatness was contingent on the success of the picture.

Millicent was quite as enthusiastic about the work as was the voluble St. Gervais, and from that to rhapsodies about the artist required but a short step.

She came home in a flutter from a visit to the studio one day, and confided to her mother that her feeling for the artist was such that she could not curb it, but must give it expression.

"What do you think he did to-day?" she asked, her face all aglow. "He kissed me, and then seized his palette and mahl-stick and began to work enthusiastically, saying that my blush was just the touch of color that had been lacking. Was I unkindly to let him kiss me? But it was so sudden that I could not help it."

"It must not be, my daughter. What do you know about him?"

"He says he is all alone in the world, and that I would fill the unoccupied part of his being."

"My God, Millicent! what have I done, to allow this thing to go on?"

"Why, mother—"

"I never dreamed of this, there was such a disparity in your ages."

The elder woman tried to induce the younger one to remain away from the studio, but Millicent refused, saying that the success of the picture, and the final triumph of the artist, were in her hands and she should continue to go until the work was done.

"I will go and see the picture and M. St. Gervais in a few days," said the mother, "and then we will see what can be done."

So she went down to his studio two or three days later, and on entering it was met by him and greeted with great politeness.

"Henri," she said—"I may call you by the old name by which I knew you in New York, may I not?"

"Certainty, Mme. la Cherington."

"My daughter must not come here any more."

"The picture is perfect now—exquisite, Henri! You do not need her for the picture any longer."

"But, madam, do not rob me of her, as you did of her mother years ago. I need her for myself. I love her."

"But that can never be."

"Oh, madam, you sound my doom!"

"You sound the girl's doom, as well as your own. It cannot be. Can you not see why?"

"Certainly not, madam. She is chic. She is spirituelle. She is the personification of what is possible in an art atmosphere when love is young."

"But your love is not young. It is old."

"Madam—pardon—I am in middle life; but my love is young—as young as hers, bless God!"

"Listen, Henri."

"Yes, madam."

At this moment, Millicent, bearing the earnest tones, stepped out from behind a screen and, unseen by either of them, stood within hearing distance while they continued their conversation.

"Henri, you have seen Mr. Cherington and the rest of my children."

"Not monsieur, but the other two children."

"Well, they are like their father, and she is unlike either of them."

"But she is like madam."

"Yes. But why are none of the others?"

"Because, madam, you drifted away from your ideals, and—"

"My God! do you know what you are saying?"

"Madam?"

"Millicent does not love Mr. Cherington, as a child should love her father. Do you know why?"

"Have I not just answered your question, madam?"

"Listen! Listen! Can you not understand?"

"Pardon—I do not understand."

"You must not make love to my daughter any more."

"Why not, madam, if she loves me, as she does?"

"Oh, you are so blind! so blind! Can you not see? Because she is your daughter as well as mine!"

DUKE'S BUBBLE.

It Burst But It Led to a Great Discovery.

It is a dreadful thing to live in the house with a thief, and worse not to know who the thief is. Dorothy and Mabel had tried over and over to solve the mystery. There seemed to be no solution to it. The mystery was this: One day in the winter a cousin of mamma's, a very beautiful young lady, had come to visit at the house. When she was dressing for dinner, she carelessly left a valuable ruby pin on the dressing table. After dinner the pin was not there!

Such a hubbub as Cousin Gladys created. She cried and cried and almost had hysterics, for the pin was her most cherished treasure. It had been given her by her grandmother, whose grandmother had in turn given it to her, so you see it was very, very old and valuable.

It was out of the question to accuse either Maria or John of dishonesty, for they were as honest as the day is long. Duke had been the soul of honor ever since he had been an inmate of the household—and what would a small fox terrier want of a large ruby breastpin, anyway? Topsy had denied any knowledge of the affair; they could not suspect her. She might have been guilty of stealing a piece of fish—or a mouse—but what would a cat want to steal rubies for?

The only possible solution was that some one had entered the house while the family was at dinner, stolen the pin and gone off without being seen. If there had only been footprints in the snow to trace the thief—but there was no sign.

So the matter was dropped entirely, except by the children who had created wonderful tales about the loss of the ruby.

One beautiful June day Mabel and Dot had a "bubble bee" all by themselves. Harold—disagreeable boy!—had gone off fishing and refused to take any girls. He declared they were "always in the way."

"I'd rather blow bubbles with my new pipe anyway," said Dot airily, as Harold went down the walk. There was a suggestion of a sob in her voice, but she held her head high. Mabel said not a word. One thing she did love—and that was to fish. Duke pushed his cold little nose comfortably into her hand. He liked to go fishing, too. But blowing bubbles was very fascinating, especially with the new colored bubble soap, and it was not long before the two little girls were happy again and Duke was wild with delight. As each bubble grew bigger and bigger, Duke barked louder and louder, and begged that one should be given him to play with. But for little dogs, bubbles are poor playthings and last but a minute. It required great attention on the part of both blowers to prevent their work meeting instant destruction.

Dot blew the best, there was no question of that, but Mabel's bubbles seemed to last longer. And it was one of Mabel's that went bouncing along on the breeze, with Duke in hot pursuit. Both girls were laughing merrily at the queer antics of Duke and his plaything, when the bubble descended and Duke pounced upon his prize. Of course, it burst at once, and the dog jumped back with a sneeze. Then, seizing something with his teeth he sprang back.

"Poor old Duke!" cried Dot. "I'll blow you one just as big, just watch." But Duke was not interested in bubbles; he had found another plaything.

"Oh, drop that old stick and come along!" cried Mabel. "See, Duke! See the nice big bubbles. Catch it, sir! Catch it!"

But Duke would pay no attention. "I believe he has something alive!" said Dot. "Perhaps it's a poor, dear little toad. Oh, Duke, aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

Duke wagged his tail, not a bit ashamed, and deposited at Dot's feet a queer and dirty object. "It isn't a toad," said Dot. "It's only an old—why, Mabel Eloise Fletcher, it's—it's—" and Dot gasped in amazement at the object in her hand. "It's Cousin Gladys' lost ruby pin!" shouted Mabel. "Where under the sun did it come from?"

Pipes were dropped in a hurry and the two little girls stood and gazed at each other in silence. Duke was jumping impatiently for his plaything. Then Mabel looked up at the house where Cousin Gladys had slept was open and the ruffled white curtain blew gently in and out. As they stood spellbound the curtain blew in toward the table and out again, and on the edge of the ruffle was a scrap of paper, which fluttered slowly to the ground. "Ah!" cried Dot softly. "I see the thief!" And then they rushed indoors to tell the news.

Great good news it was, too. The ruby pin had apparently been caught by the same curtain and gently deposited outside on the ground, as the scrap of paper had been, and there it had lain hidden in the snow and mud and new spring grass.

Cousin Gladys received a telegram that afternoon, and in reply this letter came:

"My dear little cousins, and Duke, too: I am so happy to hear that my treasure has been found, that I want you to bring it to me and to spend a week with me in the city—all three of you. So ask your mother to pack your trunk, tell your father to put you safely on the cars and I will meet you. We will have a jolly good time, and you will be here just in time to be bridesmaids at my wedding, for which you will each have a pretty new frock presented to you. I won't take 'no' for an answer."

Soon after the receipt of the letter two very important-looking little girls, and an equally important-looking little dog, started for the city, leaving Harold on the station platform waving an envious good-bye.

"Isn't it fortunate," sighed Dot as they settled back in the big cushioned seat, "that we didn't go fishing that day?"—Nancy Scott, in Washington Star.

CATCHING THE MICE.

Can You Tell How the Cat Played Fair.

"Play fair!" said the mice. "You know the rules of the game." "Yes, I know the rules," said the cat. "I've got to go round and round

the circle, in the direction that you are going, and eat every thirteenth mouse, but I must keep the white mouse for a tit-bit at the finish. Thirteen is an unlucky number, but I will do my best to oblige you."

"Hurry up, then!" shouted the mice. "Give a fellow time to think," said the cat. "I don't know which of you to start at. I must figure it out."

While the cat was working out the puzzle he fell asleep, and the spell being thus broken, the mice returned home in safety. At which mouse should the cat have started the count in order that the white mouse should be the last eaten?

When the reader has solved that little puzzle, here is a second one for him. What is the smallest number that the cat can count round and round the circle, if he must start at the white mouse (calling that "one" in the count) and still eat the white mouse last of all?

HANDY CABINET FOR SHOES.

Oblong boxes can be obtained from the grocer of any desired length and high enough to allow the shoes to be slipped in easily. They are fastened together after the fashion shown in the accompanying illustration with partitions inserted as required.

The cracks may be filled with putty, says the Prairie Farmer, and a coat of black paint added to improve the appearance of the cabinet. Flaps may be attached to the front to prevent the dust from settling on the contents, if wished.

A GOOD TRICK.

Adding Two Knives Together and Getting a Thousand.

Borrow two knives from your friends; then ask them if they can add two knives together and make a thousand. Most likely they will not be able to do it. Then you can show them the answer we give in our illustration. You see the two knives make M which is the Roman character for one thousand.

You may think you are modest as a flower, but probably your neighbors say you have nerve to buzz.

FLOWERS OF CANDY

NOVELTY OF THE SEASON IN TABLE DECORATION.

Rosebuds, Violets and Jonquils Nearly as Costly as the Real Flowers—Mint Most Expensive of the Candied Fruits.

There have never been more elaborate decorations for the table than there are this winter and they are for the sake of novelty made of candy. They are nearly as costly as the real flowers.

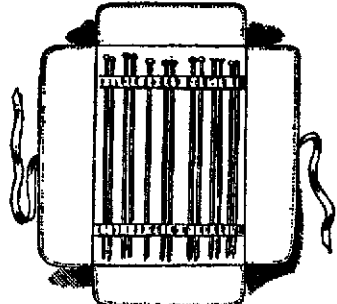

Rosebuds somewhat smaller than the original are made in pink and white and glisten like their natural prototypes with dewdrops. They cost 15 cents each, while violets as large as the best of the natural ones and seemingly lacking only the fragrance of the real flowers cost five cents more. Jonquils are made somewhat smaller than the real size and so are the exquisite purple flags, which have the same variety of shades as the originals. The candies are an expensive item at a dinner when the guests take it into their heads to eat them. It rarely happens, however, that more than one or two persons make this unusual use of them.

None of the table flowers is so elaborate as the large pansies. They are also preserved in the natural colors.

HOLDS THE KNITTING NEEDLE.

Easily Made Case That Will Be Found Very Serviceable.

We give a sketch of a very useful little case for holding knitting needles, which will be found of great service when travelling, or when carrying one's work from place to place. In fact, it will be handy on any and every occasion when the needles themselves are not actually in use. It can be made in any strong piece of silk, satin or brocade, or in kid or leather if preferred. The lining should be of wash leather in any case, while the straps which serve to hold the pins in place should be of elastic firmly stitched at intervals. It is intended that the flaps should fold over on to the needles, and the case then rolled up and tied with the ribbons as shown in our illustration.

THE USEFUL SEWING TABLE.

Martha Washington Style is One of the Prettiest.

Sewing tables, which come in every shape and variety, are always useful and pretty pieces of furniture, particularly in a flat or apartment. The Martha Washington sewing table, that happens to be the rage at present, is one of the prettiest in these designs, and is very much copied in the modern furniture, and the antique dealers advertise them extensively, but it is doubtful whether the genuine specimens can be found so readily, and if found and properly authenticated they are generally very expensive.

The empire sewing table, which has the square shaft base and the plain legs, and has two drop-leaf sides, is a very good piece of small furniture, as besides the additional room across the top, it has two deep drawers with glass handles. The Chippendale sewing tables, with the fluted legs and the three drawers, one with space for spools and silks, are also much used, and the clawfoot and empire designs are endless in their variety and price.

GOOD AS DRAUGHT PROTECTION.

Newest Use to Be Made of Flowered Cretonne.

The newest use for the popular flowered cretonne is in a draught protector. It is about half a yard deep and is used to prevent too great a draught when the lower sash of a window is opened. To make one, take a strip of the cretonne and a strip of sixteen the width of the window and sew them together all round, having first put up an interlining of stout brown paper. Then edge the whole thing with a pretty cord, making a loop of the cord at the two top corners, by which the protector is hung on to two brass hooks in the window frame.

These draught protectors make capital gifts for men living in rooms or at college and will be received with much approval. For this purpose it is

Over them is sifted a tiny shower of sugar, which barely conceals the purple and yellow tints. These blossoms cost as much as 30 cents. If every guest should decide to eat one it can be seen how much of an expense such a dish would be.

Among the candied fruits which are to be found in all shops none costs so much as the candied mint. But it is in the end less expensive than some of the others because so little of it is required. A pound of candied mint costs more than four dollars. But a taste is all that anybody requires, so strong is the flavor. The old-fashioned sugared violets have been almost entirely superseded at dinner by the new candied reproductions of the flowers. These colored flowers in candy are arranged just as the natural flowers. There are not violets and rosebuds, jonquils and fleur de lis all in one bonbonniere. The same color scheme is maintained throughout all the dishes. Just as the real jonquils are grouped together in the flower vases, so are the yellow sugar blossoms placed together with no other flower to break the color scheme.

Fortunate nowadays is the hostess who possesses low, flat candy dishes. The tops are covered with fine white perforated papers and on them the flowers are laid. They must not be crowded together, as in that way much of their effectiveness is lost. They are placed so as barely to touch. They do not retain nearly so much of their beauty when put into a deep dish.

CARE IN WASHING LACES.

Precautions Will Prolong Usefulness of Dainty Garments.

Colored embroideries should be washed in suds made of white soap in moderately warm water. They must never be boiled nor allowed to lie wet after washing. Instead, they should be hung up immediately to dry in a shady place.

Sunlight will fade the colors, and boiling or lying in a wet heap will cause them to run.

An added precaution well worth adopting is to immerse the piece previous to washing it in water containing a cupful or two of vinegar, the object being to neutralize the alkali of the soap.

Embroidered and lace-trimmed pieces should be taken from the line while but half dry and immediately ironed to secure the best result.

Never iron lace with the point of the wrong side over several layers of flannel covered with a sheet of old linen.

Never iron lace with the point of the iron if you would have it look like new. Pull and pat it into place, picking out the loops with a hairpin or pointless darning needle or bodkin. Dampen it with a wet cloth and press with the reverse iron, using its "heel" only.

better to use a smooth surface material that will not catch the dust, as housekeepers and laundresses usually are not willing to do too much shaking and brushing.

IN POMPADOUR SILK.

For a theater or dinner gown this is a charming suggestion in pink pompadour silk, with coat of plain pink satin. Trimming around bottom of skirt and at side seams is pink satin ribbon. White lace is effectively arranged at top of princess skirt and as a finish to the short sleeves. The buttons on front of coat are of rhinestones. For hair adornment there is a sweeping pink paradisio nigrette fastened in front with a spray of brilliants.

CORPSE IDENTIFIED

GUINNESS FARM MYSTERY BAF-FLES AUTHORITIES IN LA PORTE COUNTY.

RAIN PREVENTS SEARCH

Digging for Additional Bodies Will Be Resumed Today--Witnesses Being Searched for by the Officers.

La Porte, Ind., May 7.—Another victim of the Guinness farm outrages was positively identified today as the body of Ole O. Budsberg, a farmer of Iowa, Wis.

The remnants of his corpse, unearthed in the pine-shaded barnyard near here Tuesday, were recognized as the mortal remains of their father by his sons, Matt and Oscar Hudson, who reached La Porte late this afternoon.

New Developments.

Other developments in the astounding tragedy today include the following:

Declaration by Prosecuting Attorney R. N. Smith that positive evidence had been secured against a man accused of slaying Mrs. Guinness and her four children, and that plans have been laid for his indictment by the La Porte County Grand Jury on a charge of murder next Monday.

The discovery that Ole Limbon, a former employee of Mr. Guinness, on the farm, mysteriously disappeared several years ago. He has never been seen nor heard of him since. He was the man of all work on the farm. Limbon, it is believed, was one of the first to meet a murderous death within the walls of the brick mansion.

Suspicion aroused also pointing to a sixteenth victim in the series of brutal crimes in the case of Swanilda Guinness, the 7-year-old daughter of Mrs. Guinness' second husband. The girl disappeared after the mysterious death of her father. Her stepmother said she had been sent to Wisconsin, to the home of her husband's brother. It is now believed she never reached the reported destination, and that she met the same sad fate as did the nine whose corpse were huddled into crude barnyard graves.

Detection by the police of Bessie Wallace, alias Conklin, a Michigan City woman, who knew Lamphere and who, it is alleged, heard him say that he would get even with Mrs. Guinness, and that he could put her in the penitentiary if he desired to do so.

Vigorous search instituted by Sheriff Smutzer and deputies to find witnesses throughout the county who will be called before the grand jury next Monday to testify.

Pursuance of the inquiry into the tragedy by Coroner Mack, who took depositions from Asie K. Helgell, Mrs. George Arthur Olander and Sigward Olson of Chicago, brother and sister of the murdered Jennie Olson.

Rain Prevents Search.

The garden burying ground was not disturbed today because of a heavy rain. Forces of men will resume digging tomorrow.

Late tonight a telegram from Providence, R. I., indicated that a man from that city was probably one of the victims. It is also reported that an Ohio man drove to the house from La Porte and was never again seen alive.

DEFERRING TO HASKELL BOTH HOUSES ADJOURN

Senate Adjourns Early in Day, House Following in Afternoon—Propose to Tax Natural Gas.

Guthrie, Ok., May 7.—Reconsidering its action of yesterday, the senate, out of deference to Gov. Haskell's proclamation for a holiday, adjourned immediately after convening this morning. The house did likewise early in the afternoon, after a motion to do so had been voted down in the morning. During the brief session, the house completed preliminary consideration of the Anthony bill for an excise tax upon public service corporations. The rate of taxation adopted on yesterday was re-opened, and by a close vote in each instance the tax on oil and gas was reduced from 1-2 of 1 per cent to 1-4 of 1 per cent, on the total gross outputs of well.

Natural Gas Not Exempt.

By a vote of 65 to 43 an amendment by Mr. Tillotson of Nowata to eliminate the tax on natural gas was refused. An amendment by Mr. Vandeventer of Bartlesville, applying the tax only after the amount of royalties paid to land owners by lease operating properties for oil, gas, asphalt or other minerals had been deducted, was defeated by a vote of 22 to 69. Royalties in the oil belt, it was stated, ranged from one-tenth to 50 per cent with the average between 25 and 33 1-3 per cent. Mr. Anthony stated that the tax rate for all corporations had been figured on an equitable basis, but since that upon oil and gas had been reduced, the rates proposed for other corporations were unfair.

To Pay Rate Expert $2,500.

The governor's recommendation in yesterday's message regarding the expert rate clerk to the state corporation commission does not appear to have been followed by the house committee on appropriations today. The previous salary for this official was $2,500 per year, but the governor thought the proper man should be able to earn $5,000. Representative Durant offered a new bill creating the offices and employees of the commission and listed the expert rate clerk at only $5,000. In considering the measure today, the appropriation committee restored the salary to $2,500, which is the way, the committee announces, the bill will be presented to the house tomorrow.

In the matter of contingent expenses, the house committee allows the commission $50,000 or an increase of $25,000. No action has been taken regarding the office of state engineer, also recommended in the governor's message yesterday.

Representative of towns ambitious for state buildings are urging the legislature to proceed with locations of institutions now, notwithstanding the governor's recommendations in a recent message to defer them until the second legislature. The house has recalled all its bills from the senate creating schools and asylums, with the intention, it is stated, of either locating them or "killing" the whole scheme.

PRISONERS' PLANS FRUSTRATED.

Under Cover of Noise Made by Constructing Mechanics Window Bars Are Filed, but Effort Is Vain.

Chickasha, Ok., May 7.—Taking advantage of the noise caused by the hammering on the new jail now being built, prisoners at the jail had plans for escape and had almost executed them when discovered yesterday. There are sixteen prisoners in the jail, but only four of them are known to have been implicated. A file was secured and a heavy iron bar across an inner door wrenched off and used to pry the bolts from the thick sheet iron that covers the east window. Work on this window had been in progress for a day or two when discovered. With a little more work the window could have been opened, furnishing an easy avenue of escape for all incarcerated.

ELLY SOPER POSSIBLY WILL SUCCEED CAMPBELL

Belief at Washington Appointment Is Likely.

Washington, May 7.—It is believed the president will probably appoint Judge Elly Soper to the vacancy on the bench of the Eastern Judicial Circuit of Oklahoma, created by the resignation of Judge Ralph E. Campbell. There are a dozen other candidates, but it looks as though Soper would catch the plum, according to the best information obtainable.

There is nothing like unanimity among the "orthodox" republicans of the state in their support of any of the candidates. C. E. Hunter, chairman of the state committee, and C. M. Cade, National committeeman, are here supporting the claims of Frank E. Gillette of El Reno, who was one of the Territorial judges.

Representative Bird S. McGuire, the only republican member of the house from Oklahoma, is backing former Chief Justice John H. Burford, who would have been appointed to a federal judgeship when the state was admitted had he received the endorsement of the organization. McGuire stood by Burford then and is sticking to him now. Although the two senators, both of whom are democrats, are not taking much of a hand in the fight, Senator Owen presented to the president yesterday William M. Millette, a Muskogee lawyer, who is a candidate for the position.

It is not believed the appointment will be made for a week or two.

Ex-Gov. Frantz, former Rough Rider and personal friend to the president, has not endorsed any of the applicants.

TEXAS STORM VICTIMS INCLUDED IN RESOLUTION

Washington, May 7.—The house passed a resolution today extending to Texas the provision of a resolution adopted some days ago authorizing the secretary of war to issue tents and rations to persons rendered destitute by recent southern and southwestern storms. The original resolution included Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama. Representatives Sheppard of Texas and Moon of Tennessee introduced resolutions extending the provisions to sufferers from storm in Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee. The house adopted Mr. Moon's resolution, which was identical with one offered by Mr. Sheppard. Lamar county, which suffered very heavily from the storm, is in Mr. Sheppard's district.

The Vanishing Fleets

BY ROY NORTON.

agents of offense and defense than any other individual, confidently asserting that he could show them the way out of their difficulties. The president ordered that the caller be conducted to the room at once.

Had it been any less a personage than the famous inventor they would have paid small heed to the promise of hope; had they been informed in less troublous times that such an invention was pending, they would have looked upon it with great interest and curiosity; but now, when all avenues of escape seemed closed, when the eagle's perch was rocking beneath its talons and it was threatened by merciless foemen, they stared at each other in amazed silence like men who had been deprived.

It was in the midst of this stillness that the inventor entered the room and stood bewildered for a moment, peering from beneath the tath of his brows at one and another. Then, satisfied that his visit was opportune and that none was present whom he did not know, he gave them individual greetings as his acquaintanceship warranted.

"You were not expecting me," he addressed the president; "but it appears to me that there is no one here who should not know what I have to say, and who is not directly interested in what I have to show. I am glad you are all here, gentlemen," he concluded, turning to the others. And then, following the example of the president, he seated himself, and the others did likewise. They were strung with a suspense which he did not share. "Informal, isn't it?" he asked the president, and when assured that such was the case he calmly drew a handkerchief from his pocket and swept it across the dome of his forehead.

All were waiting for him to speak; but, with exasperating slowness, and without asking permission from the president, he thrust a hand into the roomy folds of his sack coat and produced a bundle of long stogies, one of which he carefully withdrew and examined with great care. He thrust it into his mouth and revolved it, apparently for the purpose of tightening a loose wrapper. He turned to the chief executive. There was an air of expectancy in the room and a leaning forward, that no word of the great secret might be lost. They caught all he said.

"Got a match, Mr. President?" he asked with the utmost nonchalance. They dropped back into their seats, some with exasperation and others smiling. The president gravely supplied his want, and then, as the evil odor of the weed was wafted round the room, he sat back in his chair, with the tips of his fingers touching each other. The secretary of war was beginning to fidget with impatience.

Roberts puffed three or four times, fixed his eyes on a cornice as if he was the sole occupant of the room, then calmly reached into a pocket and drew out a parcel which he laid on the president's desk. While every eye was fixed upon him he tilted the stogie in his mouth to an angle where the smoke would not interfere with his operations, and began unwrapping the package, throwing the newspapers on the floor at his feet. Then, came a fold of silk, and last of all a sheet of tissue paper, whose crackling crispness sounded startlingly loud in the stillness of the room.

"There!" he remarked triumphantly, exposing two small plates of metal not differing greatly in appearance from two pieces of burnished steel. Eagerly all those in the room crowded forward, while the president gingerly took one of the slabs in his fingers. "New explosive?" he asked.

"No, they're harmless." The inventor smiled.

The others looked eagerly at them as the president held them, wondering what connection the two little strips of metal could possibly have with the defense of a nation against a multitude of battle ships. Nothing but Roberts' known ability prevented them from looking upon him as a crank. They inspected the objects, before them in turn, passing them from hand to hand with blank looks. Only the secretary of war, who in his earlier years had been a metallurgist, showed any signs of surprise or amazement. He turned excitedly away and crossed the room to a side light, against which glare he held the little plate, staring at it fixedly. The inventor smiled, and the others renewed their interest. The secretary hurried back.

"What on earth is it, Dr. Roberts?" he asked, and then without waiting for an explanation continued: "I never saw a metal that looked or felt like it. What is it?"

"Gentlemen," said the inventor, recovering the slab and balancing it in his hands, "that is a new plate that can be made cheaply and quickly. If it does what the laboratory tests show, it will, when applied to cruisers which can now steam 20 knots an hour, make 50 knots an easy gait for them."

There was a gasp of astonishment amounting almost to incredulity among those who crowded round, and the scientist, enjoying the effect of his words, smiled and smoked. A moment's pause ensued while the possibilities of the discovery dawned on them. Those who knew him least were again questioning his sanity, and then, as if all at once they could wait no longer for him to explain, they burst into a chorus of questions, which he did not answer. He waited until no voice was heard, and then began.

Judge Stewart Here.

Judge Charles B. Stewart of South McAlester, came over yesterday on legal business and spent the night in Ada. He was U. S. judge in this country under Grover Cleveland from 1892 to 1896 at that time the district included all of the Indian Territory and he resigned that position to accept one more lucrative, the general attorneyship of the Rock Island railroad.

The Presbyterian Church.

The session of the Presbyterian church extended a call to Rev. J. D. White of Mountain Grove, Mo., to succeed me at this place. A letter from Mr. White this morning stated he had accepted the work and will be here for the 5th Sunday in May. Mr. White comes to us well recommended and has a good record behind him. He is a native of Mississippi. We predict for him a good future at Ada.

WARM GAME BEING PLAYED AT GUTHRIE

Special to News.
Guthrie, Ok., May 8, 2 p. m.—The location of public building contest is waxing warm and growing apace.
The house rescinded its action this morning recalling public institution bills and now the principal scene of legislative play has shifted to the senate. As a preliminary, a relative showing of strength was brought about in both houses this morning. The result was decidedly satisfactory to Ada. Both the house and senate committees have separate and independent meetings tonight. There promises to be a quick report from the senate committee when within all probability nails, big spikes will begin to be driven.
There may be public building legislation this month. It looks like it now. If so, Ada's prospects could not be more favorable.

Ada Ball Team Defeated.

Ada was defeated in the third game of the series at Madill yesterday, the score stood 3 to 2. Ada had the game won but Kelsner made a bad throw to first in the eleventh inning and let in one run. We can't win all of them. Ada has one of the best teams in the country and its citizens should be proud of it. Martin held them down to three hits while they got seven off Madill. The team is at Tishomingo and will play a series of three games.

The senior class play, "The Comedy of Errors" was rendered at the Ardmore Thursday evening, and the play house was literally filled to overflowing. The play was presented in splendor. Each played his or her part well and the large audience often expressed by liberal applause its appreciation of the efforts of the young performers.

Special Notice.

I desire to call the attention of the public to Section 14 of ordinance No. 81, which reads as follows:

"No plumber shall extend any water pipes, or introduce any pipe, hydrant, bath or water closet, urinal, or hose connection or furnish, fit or connect any device or fixture whatever for the use of water without the written order of the recorder; no plumber or other person except the superintendent of the water works shall turn on or off the water at the street stop cocks under any circumstances."

Also the following Section No. 25 of same ordinance as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person except the superintendent of the water works to interfere with any street stop cock, or to turn the water off or on therefrom or to knowingly permit it to be done without giving immediate notice thereof to the recorder."

Another section of this ordinance states no other parties are allowed to use water from the same hydrant, unless permission is granted.

I have special instructions from the council and mayor to enforce all sections of this ordinance, that I find being violated. I hereby warn all parties that same will be done, and parties will be arrested if the ordinance is not complied with.

Respectfully,
W. H. MARKHAM,
Water Commissioner.
